

The full spectrum of construction services related to the coal mining industry

100% BLACK-OWNED

After decades of collective experience navigating the ‘boom or bust’ construction industry; the JEDD team believed we had seen it all. However, the unprecedented impact of the current global economic downturn on the construction industry has changed that.

If the health economy is used as a barometer, there is little doubt that ‘construction’ has the power to lead the way out of this crisis. To do that, it is important for us that as the business environment has changed forever... so must we.

At JEDD, we have always been steadfast in our core values of quality, safety, integrity, transparency, professionalism, community empowerment and black empowerment – and that will never change. But, as we’ve witnessed changing market needs, we have taken a full 360° review of our business and reengineered it to meet those changing needs.

To counter the trend of packaging businesses into independent – often unrelated – specialist silos that cater to distinct aspects of a project we take on: JEDD is getting back to basics. We combine all of our world-class skills, expertise and resources, to offer our clients a single source for comprehensive service that partners with them through every phase of the project lifecycle.

Our 100% black-owned, mid-tier construction powerhouse is ready to build those kinds of partnerships and begin working on all your new project ideas.

Teamwork is the axis around which the success of every construction project rotates. The partnerships between our own businesses are valued as much as those with our clients.
